

Trust and Dependence

Since man (and woman) took over the reigns controlling their own lives, different methods have developed that aided their independence and self-reliance. These are not considered to be undesirable traits, unless it has to do with our relationship with God.

The first “go to” (instead of going to Our Father for answers or aid) were the judges. After that came the kings, and then there were the prophets. All of these were necessary and engineered by God for His plan and purpose for humankind. We still have all these “go tos” today, plus what I call a present day flood of information.

People are confused, drowning from TMI, seeking authentic answers, but being mislead and ill-informed in many cases. Both news media and social media play a major role in this confusion and misinformation.

YouTube and Google have all the answers and/or instructions for any need, and lots of them. Artificial intelligence has taken on a role, not unlike that of “Hal” in, “2001- A Space Odyssey”, in the form of, you guessed it, Alexa. She can take the wheel, can’t she?

May I suggest we do as Jesus instructed (not suggested) to seek first the kingdom, in all our ways... not artificial intelligence, but divine knowledge. We have been distracted from The Way in many subtle ways.

“Trust in the Lord with all your heart. Lean not to your own understanding, but in all your ways acknowledge Him, and He will direct your path.”
